

This Dust of Words

New film

THIS DUST OF WORDS a film by Bill Rose

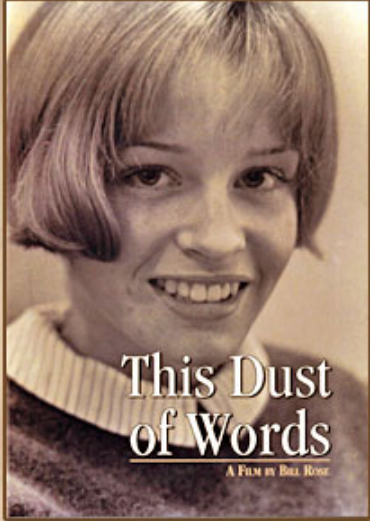

About the Film

Thirty years after he last saw her, Stanford English professor John Felstiner finds mystery and wonder in the life of a former student, and in her death. This Dust of Words, whose title is taken from Elizabeth Wiltsee's 1969 Stanford honors' thesis, is the story of a life lived differently, strange, beautiful and haunting, right to the very end.

Credits

Written, Produced and Directed by Bill Rose
Based on the memoir by John Felstiner
Photographed by Mickey Freeman and Bill Rose
Edited by Rick LeCompte
Music by David Darling, Ketil Bjornstad, Flesh Quartet and Lisa Rafel
Voice of Elizabeth Wiltsee: Allison Jean White

62 min. Color

The film

Parish in Greek means "beside the dwelling." This Dust of Words is the story of Liz, a bright, warm, young woman whose descent into mental illness and homelessness brings her to a parish in rural USA, where the parishioners and Liz learn what it means to dwell beside each other, struggling to know how to love. Yet this love is given and received, and a relationship is born.

The Rev. Margaret Marquardt, Co-Chair, Eco-Justice Unit

Facilitator for showing the film

Judy Graves, expert on issues of homelessness for the city of Vancouver, has volunteered to facilitate parish conversations on this film. If you would like Judy to attend a showing in your parish, please get directly in touch with her at judy.graves@vancouver.ca to arrange a date suitable for both her and your parish.

~ Next step ~

You book the film

The diocese purchased the film in the category of 'institutional use', so there is no problem to show it to large groups. The film is available on loan for one week. Cost: $30. Please e-mail bgruver@vancouver.anglican.ca or call Bettina at 604 684-6306 ext 226 to book your date.

More film details: www.thisdustofwords.com